

Upper Yough Power Projects Consolidated in One Company With Capital of $13,000,000

Engineering Details Being Worked Out in Readiness For Early Start.

TO DEVELOP 76,000 K. W.

All the steps necessary to carrying forward the hydro-electric power development of the Upper Youghiogheny river and its tributaries have been taken preliminary to starting the actual work of construction in the early spring. The engineering details are being worked out by Charles B. Hawley & Company, Inc., of Washington, D. C., and the financial arrangements are being completed.

Following the recent application of the Youghiogheny Hydro-Electric Company to the Maryland State Tax Commission for a charter of incorporation with an authorized capital stock of $13,000,000, this company, together with the Youghiogheny Power Company and the Youghiogheny Water & Electric Power Company, has applied to the Maryland Public Service Commission for authority to transfer all franchises and properties of the companies to the Youghiogheny Hydro-Electric Company. Permission has also been requested for authority of the consolidated company to issue $7,500,000 of securities.

The petition to the commission sets forth that the companies it is proposed to consolidate into the Youghiogheny Hydro-Electric Company are now actively engaged in developing water power of the Youghiogheny river and its tributaries in Garrett county, Maryland, and are undertaking the construction of four hydro-electric plants, each of 19,000 kilowatt capacity, and three power stations, embracing the Sand Run development, Swallow Falls development, Deer Creek development and Gremlin development, each of 19,000 kilowatt capacity, and a fourth development, the Swallow Falls development, each of 19,000 kilowatt capacity, and a fourth development, the Swallow Falls development, each of 19,000 kilowatt capacity.

The Swallow Falls development will consist of an earthen storage dam with a concrete core wall about 75 feet high, and will have a storage capacity of 8,750,000 cubic feet. Treated water will be carried through concrete conduit of horse-shoe shape, also feet in diameter, to a power house on the east bank of the Youghiogheny river, near the mouth of Hoyer run. A maximum head of 7 feet will be available. The conduit leading from the intake at the dam to the surge tank at the top of the hill back of the power house, will be about 700 feet long. From this point the conduit will be a steel pipe nine feet in diameter and 1,000 feet long, and will serve 212,000 K. A. hydro-electric units.

The power house for this development will be constructed in units and when the Swallow Falls development has been completed, the Deer Creek development will be enlarged to accommodate two more units. This development is designed to produce 11,000-10 kilowatt hours annually, while the total carrying capacity for the combined development will be in excess of 76,000 kilowatts and will produce more than 300,000,000 kilowatt hours annually.

General offices of the Youghiogheny Hydro-Electric Company have been established in the Equitable Building, Baltimore.

COYNE GUILTY IN SECOND DEGREE

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 9.—After four and one-half hours' deliberation the one woman and eight men that composed the jury trying Patrick J. Coyne, legless Port Perry railroad worker charged with the murder of his 18-year-old bride in their home last July, returned a verdict of second degree murder last night.

The legless man seemed but little affected by the verdict that carries a penal sentence of from one to 20 years. As the foreman of the jury read the verdict in a voice that trembled with emotion, Coyne listened calmly. When the foreman ceased speaking Coyne's face broke into a smile. The only excitement apparent was that revealed by his hands tightening on the arms of his wheel-chair. Some of the jurors were in tears.

Attorney Louis Little, Coyne's counsel, was extremely agitated when he heard the verdict. "He is an innocent man," Little said, "and we have shown his innocence."

1922 COKE STRIKE COST UNION $711,645.33 AND THE WORKERS $6,500,000 AND PERHAPS MORE

The sympathy strike of mine and coke workers in the Connellsville region in 1922 cost the United Mine Workers of America, by which the strike was conducted and financed, a total of $711,645.33.

This information is from a not less authentic source than the annual report of William Green, international treasurer of the miners' organization, which he submitted at the recent biennial convention held at Indianapolis. Reviewing briefly the great cost and importance to the union of the struggle in the Connellsville region by saying:

"We supplied from the International treasury, as financial aid to the striking mine workers in the coke region the sum of $115,000.00. District and local unions, particularly in District No. 5 (Western Pennsylvania) contributed $216,645.33 more. A total of approximately $711,645.33 was contributed by the different branches of the organization as aid during the strike in the coke region."

To provide funds in addition to the balance on hand when the strike began and the dues collected during the progress of the strike, the international union borrowed $444,000. Of this amount $550,000 was secured on loans from banks in Indianapolis and New York; $50,000 from the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and $218,000 from various district locals in amounts ranging from $10,000 to $25,000. A number of labor organizations outside the mine workers, including several in Europe, made donations, the aggregate of which was $115,101.

Treasurer Green stated that all of the loans and other obligations incurred during the strike had been fully discharged before the preparation of his report.

What was the cost to the workers of the Connellsville region through loss in wages there is no means of ascertaining with exactness, but assuming that an average of 10,000 men were idle for five out of seven months during which it continued, and that their average earnings in the meantime would have been no more than $5.00 per man per day, the loss in wages alone was $50,000,000. This with the cost to the union would make the aggregate cost of the strike considerably more than $7,000,000.

Conspiracy With Pioneer Oil Co. Laid to Sinclair

By United Press

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—Harry P. Sinclair was enabled to get his lease on Teapot Dome from former Interior Secretary Fall by means of a conspiracy with the Pioneer Oil Company, the Senate investigating committee was told today.

The conspiracy was charged in a complaint filed in court by Sen. Stack of Denver charging that the Pioneer Oil Company entered into a conspiracy with Sinclair to abandon its just rights to Teapot Dome.

Droping by the Pioneer company of its claims permitted Sinclair to go ahead with his leasing negotiations with Fall, the complainant charged. The complaint was read to the committee today at the request of Senator Walsh of Montana.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—Suits will be filed to cancel the Teapot Dome and California oil leases within 10 days or two weeks at the longest, Atlas Petroleum and Sinclair, presidential counsel, withdrew today. Sheriff Charged With Murder of Klan Leader In Trouble at Herrin

UNDERWORLD COMBED IN SEARCH FOR SLAYER OF LOUISE LAWSON

By United Press

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—Back home in the Texas town where her daddy kept a grocery store, Louise Lawson was a child prodigy. Not a girl for miles around in the Lone Star State could play the piano as Louise could at 12. Her folks sent her to New York from Walnut Springs to complete a musical education, a little girl of a Texas girl with winsome cultured manner that made her influential friends.

Today a grief-stricken mother was hurrying north and physicians were performing an autopsy on the brain of the girl who was 24 when she met violent death Friday, to determine if she was strangled or smothered in her luxurious apartments, known as "The Monastery." And it was not in musical circles that police and detectives searched for the murderer and the motive but in the haunts of bootleggers and "fences" and the murky byways of the city's underworld where jewel thieves hide.

Wealthy friends and sponsors of the Texas girl, including G. M. Dahl, chairman of the executive committee of a big transit company, were being questioned.

Two men who gained admission to Miss Lawson's apartments a few hours before her death was discovered told the elevator boy they were bootleggers. Three jewel cases furnished in mahogany that matched the furniture in the apartment had been removed. Platinum watches, diamonds and other jewels were missing.

The movie lure had drawn the little Texas moth for a while, it developed, and when she last visited Walnut Springs admiring friends were given to understand she had become successful as a film actress. This explained the smart clothes and the brilliant gems.

Alleged Slayer Breaks Down When Called to Stand

By United Press

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—Morris B. Diamond, on trial for murder and the robbery of two West End bank messengers, became hysterical when he took the stand in his own defense this afternoon.

Shrieking, waving his handkerchief, sobbing and shaking convulsively, the defendant broke down completely when the name of his brother, Joseph, who under indictment, was mentioned.

The case rested its case this morning after introducing transcript of question and answers taken at the time the defendant was arrested in which the defendant told of the bloody money, later identified as that taken from the murdered messenger, being thrown into his lap by two unidentified men as they ran past him.

TROOPS RUSH TO SCENE

By United Press

CAIRO, Feb. 9.—Sheriff George Galligan, Williamson county, was arrested here today on a warrant charging first degree murder in connection with the slaying of Caesar Gagle, Ku Klux Klan leader, in Herrin last night.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Feb. 9.—Five companies of Illinois National Guardsmen today patrolled Herrin and 10 additional companies are under arms at their home stations, awaiting orders to move on Herrin if the "boozie war" outbreak spreads.

HERRIN, Ill., Feb. 9.—The Carbonado troops of the Illinois National Guard took control of this Williamson county mining camp today, and with loaded rifles patrolled the Herrin Hospital, which was fired upon today by 100 alleged Ku Klux Klansmen.

Several men for whom the alleged Klansmen said they had warrants for the killing of Caesar Gagle, Klan leader, on the street last night took refuge in the hospital and fired a volley at the approaching band. The fire was returned.

The attackers then retired from the hospital in which John Layman, deputy sheriff and leader of the anti-Klan element, lies with a bullet wound received in a gun battle shortly before Gagle was shot.

Martial law for Herrin is imminent and probably will be declared as soon as two or three more companies of troops, now on their way here, arrive.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Feb. 9.—Further outbreaks at Herrin early today caused Adjutant General Black to call out the four local companies of the National Guard. The companies were mobilized at the state arsenal in taxicabs for entrainment to Herrin. These companies were in addition to other Illinois troops called out at midnight. Word here was that clashes occurred between Klansmen and anti-Klans.

HERRIN, Ill., Feb. 9.—Five companies of Illinois National Guard, numbering 300 men were converging on Herrin today to halt the threat of another bloody massacre in Williamson county as a result of war between members of the Ku Klux Klan and anti-Klansmen. Trouble sprang up in two mob fights just before midnight, resulting in the slaying of a Herrin policeman and Klan leader and a deputy sheriff of the anti-Klan faction.

Caesar Gagle, Klan policeman, was shot to death on the street here shortly after Deputy Sheriff John Layman, bitter enemy of the Klan and its wholesale liquor raids, was shot and seriously wounded at a meeting of liquor raid victims.

The three policemen were held today for safety from mob violence in the jail at Muskegon, the seat of an adjoining county.

The trouble started in a meeting of several score victims of the liquor raiders, gathered in a Herrin hall to formulate plans of retaliation against the activities of Klansmen led by Glen Young, unofficial "prohibition czar" of the county who is employed by the Klan as raid leader.

Young and his raiders, under federal warrants, have arrested nearly 1,000 alleged liquor law violators in two months.

The meeting also was said to have been the gathering of the "Knights of the Flaming Circle," an anti-Klan organization formed here last year. Sheriff George Galligan, who led the protest against the Klan's activities by calling state troops because of riot conditions a month ago, came to the meeting about 10 o'clock last night with 120 men, his most trusted deputy.

The sheriff started to address the liquor raid victims, advising them to "take it easy" and let things take their legal course. The door of the hall opened and John Furl, chief of police of Herrin, and two of his policemen entered with drawn shotguns. An uproar started, followed by half a dozen shots. The smoke cleared and it was found Layman had been shot through the back.

Sheriff Galligan, fearing violence against the policemen, all Klan advocates placed in office last month after the Klan had forced the police force to resign, hurried them into an automobile and drove to Murphyboro.

Revels to Continue. Revival meetings are continuing each night at 8 o'clock at the Gospel Mission, East Crawford avenue near Murphy avenue. The mission is crowded practically every night. Interest is increasing. Further announcements will be made next week. Miss Sophie Nicklans and Miss Violet Round are in charge.

OUR DAILY FOOD

To begin the day a little reasonable fruit is always appropriate. Oranges, grapefruit and tangerines are plentiful. A dish of well-cooked cereal follows the fruit, hot cakes with sausage, bacon or ham are always good foods to serve and well liked. Followed by a doughnut and coffee, one is sustained until the noon meal.

A good luncheon menu is hot cheese sandwiches, a simple lettuce salad, or a dish of radishes and green onions, baking powder biscuits with a little canned fruit and a few cookies for dessert.

If the main meal is served at night the luncheon should be quite simple, but nourishing.

For dinner one may have a steak, or a roast of some kind, a baked stuffed fish, fried chicken, or a baked ham—a few of the many good main dishes from which to choose.

With the stuffed fish serve hot landaise sauce with cauliflower, parsley, potatoes, any fresh salad or sliced cucumbers, a caramel custard and coffee with small cakes.

With the broiled steak serve baked potatoes, creamed onions or buttered carrots and lettuce salad, with an ice cream served with a sauce, either maple or caramel, and coffee.

Spinach With Cream.—Wash three pounds of spinach and put to cook in a saucepan, cover without adding more water and cook, stirring occasionally, after twelve minutes put through a sieve, saving all the liquor; add four tablespoonsful of butter, salt and pepper to taste and cook for fifteen minutes or until perfectly tender. Now add three tablespoonsful of cream, mix well and serve piled on a hot platter with croutons for garnish, surrounding the spinach.

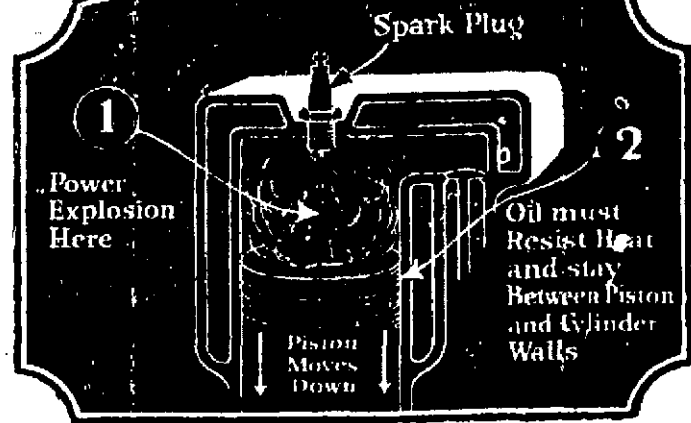

Chicken Purée.—Take the white meat from the breast of a chicken which has been roasted; add a tablespoonful of bread crumbs. Pound the bread and meat, mixing with a little of the broth to moisten, season to taste, heat and serve in small cups.

Save Power Where Power is Produced

TO A CERTAIN degree, all motor oils burn away with each explosion of your motor. The oil with the highest fire-resistant test burns away least, and separates best the surfaces of your motor which tend to rub.

Upon this separating film of oil, depends two things—the ease with which a motor turns over, and the amount of power which "leaks" past your piston. Upon both of these conditions, depends the amount of power delivered to the rear wheels.

—all other conditions being equal.

This chain of facts explains why users of FREEDOM Perfect Motor Oil notice increased power on the hills; why they notice a quicker "get-a-way." FREEDOM Perfect Motor Oil has an exceptionally high heat and fire test. It reduces friction, maintains an oil seal and saves power where power is produced.

Mistook His Opponent

Two pickaninies, not thoroughly accustomed to ocean bathing, were engaged in a "water fight" off a Florida beach one winter afternoon. The fight consisted of desperate attempts on the part of each combatant, breast deep in water to dash more of the ocean in his opponent's face than he himself was getting. They did not notice the huge wave which rolled slowly up to them, lifted the little fellow nearest the beach clean off his feet, and set him gently in the back water. Considerably surprised, the pickaniny rose to the surface, dripping and spluttering, and turned to his companion, an awed expression on his face. "Boy," he said breathlessly, "boy, you got me licked."—Harper's Magazine.

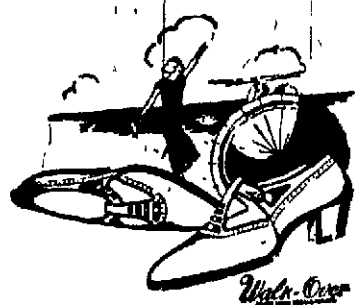

Assuming the Blame

A school provided over by a very old and bed-tendered archer had a to afternoon from the bishop of the diocese. The bishop, a genial soul, called before him a white-faced archer who was very much cowed and depressed by an undeserved punishment he had received that morning. "My boy," said the bishop, in eloquent tones, "who made this great and glorious earth of ours, and set the sun moon and stars in the wonderful firmament?" The white-faced boy began to blubber. "I did," he said, "but I won't do it again."

FOR EQUITABLE ASSESSMENTS.

The suggestion, made through the columns of The Courier, that assessors to the city assessor be appointed to assist in the tripartite assessment of property, has the merit of being both sensible and timely.

As pointed out no one person is sufficiently familiar with real estate values in all parts of the city to assess the hundreds of properties without making some declaration as to the perpetuation of the inequalities which all well informed persons know exist. It is conceded that some properties are over assessed and others under assessed. The intent of the law and the aim of conscientious assessors is to make all valuations equitable and fair, but no one person can be expected to know so much about values in all parts of the city that he can appraise the value of the many different properties without making mistakes.

If three or more persons who are posted on values in their respective sections of the city were designated by City Council to confer with the city assessor in a final revision of his valuations, it is evident that the composite judgment of the assessor and his advisors would make it possible to arrive at decisions which more nearly represent the true assessment values and by that means remove the inequalities which have long existed. It is an unfair that any property owner should pay more than his or her share of taxes as the result of an excessive assessment or other taxpayers should escape their just share of the tax burden through too low a valuation. Instances of this kind are not so numerous as are more frequently the source of complaint about taxation than a high millage.

The assessment is being made in the public interest and the only way to make it fair is to have it distributed. It is a right to which property owners are entitled and which should be assured them.

THE SPRING PRIMARY.

Voters are likely to overlook the fact that the state-wide primary election is to be held in the spring, not the early fall, of this year. Tuesday, April 23, is the date.

To qualify for voting at this election it will be necessary to enroll as a member of the Republican, Democratic, Socialist, Prohibition or Progressive party, voters being required to state their party preference when requesting a ballot upon which to indicate their choice of candidates at the primary.

For the purpose of enrolling and assigning voters according to party preferences and affiliations the assessors in boroughs and townships of the county will sit at the polling places between 10 o'clock A. M. and 3 o'clock P. M. and from 6 to 9 o'clock P. M. on Tuesday, February 19 and Wednesday February 20.

In Connelville and Uniontown, clerks of the townships, the registration assessors will sit at their respective polling places from 8 o'clock A. M. to 1 o'clock P. M. and 2 o'clock P. M. du Wednesday April 2, to register prospective voters who were not registered last fall, and to change the party preference of any who so desire.

In case voters will have to be absent from their polling places on Tuesday, April 22, the date of the primary election, and desire to cast their ballot, they can do so provided they apply to the county commissioners not more than 30 days nor less than three days before election day, for blank forms, affidavits and ballot and instructions as to voting and forwarding to the election board.

The forth-coming primary is important in that a judge of the Superior Court, a state treasurer, an auditor general, a Representative in Congress in each Congressional district, a State Senator in each odd numbered senatorial district and Representatives in the General Assembly, are to be nominated. In the party primaries district delegates and alternates and delegates and alternates at large to the national conventions, members of the state committee, members of the county committee and other party officers in the county are to be elected. In the Democratic party a member of the national committee is to be elected.

Aside from the fact that this is a presidential year all good citizens will realize the importance of qualifying as voters so they can assist in the nomination of capable and well qualified candidates.

Co-operative Marketing For Producers and Consumers

In a letter to the National Council of Farmers' Co-operative Marketing Associations, which has been in session at Washington, D. C., President Coolidge, urged that the urban consumers join with the producers in furthering the movement, saying:

"I have many times declared my conviction that the development of a powerful co-operative movement in this country is one of the needs of this period of economic readjustment. Much has been accomplished along this line in many American communities, but it cannot be said that the co-operative idea has found a very firm lodgment in the actual practice of the great majority of the American people.

"Yet the examples of its advantages, which have been set before us in this and other countries, are so numerous and impressive that one cannot but wish that every encouragement may be extended to such organizations as your own, which are seeking to establish a national co-operative purpose and spirit.

"Especially in regard to agricultural statements, when we consider how high a price the consumer pays in proportion to the price the producer receives, we cannot but feel that there is a great opportunity for service to both the consuming and producing groups of the public.

"We are all included in one or the other of those groups, and most of us in both of them. In the long run, we will all be benefited, if we can lessen the burdensome cost of conveying our necessities from the producer to the consumer.

"There is need for co-operative organizations among agricultural producers to help them both in selling their products for a better price and buying their requirements more cheaply. There is likewise need for organization of the urban consumers, to give like benefits. The establishment of a close working relationship between these two groups ought to be the ideal to which the larger co-operative movement of the country should aim."

Retainer from People Is Different

Philadelphia Evening Ledger.

It is no discredit to William G. McAdoo that he has accepted a retainer from E. L. Doherty to look after his oil interests in Mexico and also "in any and all matters." Mr. McAdoo is a lawyer in private life and may without question accept retainers from any big business interests that choose to employ him. This much should be said in fairness to him.

This much also must be said in fairness to the rest of us; that a lawyer who is now in the employ of Mr. Doherty is disqualified from receiving a retainer from the people of the United States to protect their interests against the interests of his oil-producing client.

Just Folks

SENTIMENT.
If you can see in bloom of tree
A hint of boyhood's happier days
Or in the gleam of silver stream
Discover long forgotten waves;
If in a boy you glimpse a face
You loved before you'd earned a cent,
And claim from him some memory dim,
You've still the touch of sentiment.

If you are stirred by call of bird
To search him out in bush or tree,
And make the quest to find his nest,
You're still the boy you used to be.
If in your throat a lump you note
When you think of a grief you've known,
If you must share the pain they bear,
Age has not turned your heart to stone.

If when you walk, sometimes your talk
Is not of gold or trade or fame,
But rather days and happy days
When you knew many a flower by name;
If church or school or dimpled pool
Or long deserted barn or mill
Still takes you back over memory's track,
You've something cynics cannot kill.

"Official Laundress" Knows Whether April Showers Will Spoil Your New Spring Frock

MISS FISHER AT HER MINIATURE TUBS

NEW YORK CITY—Will April showers ruin your new spring frock?

Miss Helen Fisher can tell you. As "official laundress" for a testing company she spends her time doing up samples of dress material to discover whether laundering causes them to fade. If a color "runs" or fades it means months of work for some body out in the dye plant to do all over again.

The new industry has taken on huge proportions since the advent of American dye makers returned to a study of the problem after the war interval of a new permanent color process for commercial use—compounded of American, German and French dyes.

MILLIONS USE NATIONAL FORESTS FOR RECREATION

Report Shows That 8,000,000 Persons Visited Areas During the Year 1922.

The extent to which the national forests are being used for recreational purposes is shown by the fact that well over 8,000,000 persons visited the forests during 1922, says Col. W. B. Giesley, chief of the forest service, United States Department of Agriculture.

In 1917, the first year records of the number of persons visiting the national forests were compiled, roughly more than 8,000,000 visitors were recorded. In 1922 this figure stood at over 8,000,000, thus showing a doubling in the number of visitors to the forests in six years. All indications point to a continued increase for the future, the report states.

The use of the national forests for recreation is in all respects deserving of encouragement, the report says. It means for no small part of the country a population of a valuable opportunity and privilege. Recreation provided for recreational use will add valuable elements to our national life without seriously hampering the capacity of the forests to create wealth or render other public service.

One of the important duties of officers of the forest service the report continues, is the protection of game animals and fish, two resources of the forests which are closely related to the use of forested areas as recreation grounds.

The wild life resources of the national forests, it continues, must be maintained, protected and utilized much as are the timber and forest resources. The cost of this activity in common with providing facilities for recreation and conserving the sources of water, will never be recovered to the form of commercial receipts, but is justified by the valuable public service which the national forests can thus contribute.

More game refuges and fish breeding streams and ponds should be set aside to provide for protected breeding to meet the rapidly increasing use of the forests for recreational purposes. Careful consideration must be given to available food supplies for the desirable animals and a system of regulated use devised that will prevent depletion of all wild life.

Heirs in Quarrel Over Gold in "Land Bank"

When the will of Mrs. Pharris was filed for probate, it stated that her grandfather buried $105,000 on his farm in two chests, one in Atchison and the other near Superior, Nebraska.

Three heirs to the estate of Mrs. Pharris of Atchison, Kan. sought to establish claims to $45,000 in gold near Superior, Neb. leaving a chart describing the location. Mrs. Pharris said in 1914 she located the treasure and exhausted $12,000 which she believed was her share. She said she left the remainder and buried the $12,000 at the end of Fifth street in Atchison.

Mrs. T. B. Smith, Superior, Neb., Mrs. Estelle Polk and Mrs. Lillian Lindsey of Leavenworth claimed the money. Mrs. Smith said Mrs. Polk had secretly withdrawn $5,500 from the Superior land bank. Mrs. Polk denied getting the money.

SUFFERED SINCE YOUNG GIRL

Words Failed to Express Benefit Received from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Greenville, Texas.—"Words cannot express how much good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. Every month I would have cramps and headache, and I felt like I was freezing to death. I suffered in this way from the time I was a young girl, and all the doctors said was 'operation.' For months I had a tired, weary feeling all day, and when night would come I would be so nervous I couldn't stay in bed. Our druggist recommended the Vegetable Compound to my husband and he bought four bottles. I have taken every one and I think I have a right to praise your medicine."—Mrs. J. B. HOLLMAN, 2214 E. Marshall Street, Greenville, Texas.

For fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been used by women from girlhood through middle age.

The Soisson

"UP SEE GOES," with Douglas MacLean in the leading role, is the feature attraction today at this theatre.

The story contains a generous number of humorous situations resulting from the hero's unsuccessful attempts to avoid having to fly an airplane when he has never been in one before. In the final episode of the comedy the laughter becomes a scream of delight as the star is seen perpetrating some of the most novel and shrieking stunts in his airplane.

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday "Main Street," with Monte Blue and Irene Rich as the stars, will be shown.

The Orpheum

"CAMEO KIRBY," on view today at this theatre is a William Fox picture with John Gilbert in the stellar role.

Gertrude Olmsted and Jean Arthur do good work as the feminine leads.

Notwithstanding the warm spring air he was conscious of a certain chilliness. Her level, indifferent tone seemed to him almost abnormally calm. A horrible realization flashed for a moment in his brain. She was speaking of the man whom she had killed!

"Your father overheard a remark of mine," Francis told her. "I was at Soto's with a friend—Andrew Wilmore, the novelist—and to tell you the truth we were speaking of the shock I experienced when I realized that I had been devoting every effort of which I was capable to saving the life of—shall we say a criminal? Your father heard me say, in rather a flamboyant manner, perhaps that in future I declared war against all crime and all criminals."

She smiled very faintly, a smile which had in it no single element of joy or humor.

"I can quite understand my father intervening," she said. "He sees as being rather a patron of artistically-perpetrated crime. She is his favorite author, and I believe that he has exceedingly grim ideas as to dueling and fighting generally. He was in prison once for six months at New Orleans for killing a man who insulted my mother. Nothing in the world would ever have convinced him that he had not done a perfectly legitimate thing."

"I am expecting to find him quite an interesting study, when I know him better," Francis pronounced. "My only fear is that he will count me an unfriendly person and refuse to have anything to do with me."

"I am not at all sure," she said differently. "That it would not be very much better for you if he did."

"I cannot admit that," he answered, smiling. "I think that our paths in life are too far apart for either of us to influence the other. You don't share his views, do you?"

"Which ones?" she asked after a moment's silence.

"Well, looking for one," he replied. "They tell me that he is the greatest living patron of the ring, both here and in America."

"I have never been to a fight in my life," she confessed. "I hope that I never may."

"I can't go so far as that," he declared. "But boxing isn't altogether one of my hobbies. Can't we leave your father and his tastes alone for the present? I would rather talk about—ourselves. Tell me what you care about most in life?"

"Nothing," she answered listlessly. "But that is only a phase," he persisted. "You have had terrible trials, I know, and they must have affected your outlook on life, but you are still young, and while one is young life is always worth having."

"I thought so once," she assented. "I don't now."

"But there must be—there will be compensations," he assured her. "I know that just now you are suffering from the reaction—after all you have gone through. The memory of that will pass."

"The memory of what I have gone through will never pass," she answered. There was a moment's intense silence, a silence pregnant with repulsive drama.

"Please look at me," he begged, a little abruptly.

She turned her head in some surprise. Francis was almost handsome in the clear spring sunlight, his face alight with animation, his deepest gray eyes full of amused yet anxious solicitude. Even as she appreciated these things and became dimly conscious of his eager interest, her perturbation seemed to grow.

"Well?" she ventured.

"Do I look like a person who knew what he was talking about?" he asked. "On the whole, I should say that you did," she admitted.

"Very well, then," he went on cheerfully. "Believe me when I say that the shadow which depresses you all the time now will pass. I say this confidently," he added, his voice softening, "because I hope to be allowed to help. Haven't you guessed that I am very glad indeed to see you again?"

They had passed through Lanes-Jones passage and were in the quiet end of Curzon street.

"But you must not talk to me like that!" she expostulated.

"Why not?" he demanded. "We have met under strange and untoward circumstances, but are you so very different from other women? Will you not accept my friendship?"

"It is impossible," she replied. "May I be allowed to call on you?" he went on doggedly.

"I do not receive visitors," she answered.

"I am sorry," he said, "but I cannot accept my dismissal like this. I shall appeal to your father. However much he may dislike me, he has at least common sense."

She looked at him with a touch of the old horror in her coldly questioning eyes.

"In Your Way You Have Been Kind to Me," She Admitted.

"Because I am a luxury and comfort-loving person," she answered deliberately, "because my father gladly pays my accounts at Louisa and Worth and Reville, because I have never learned to do without things, and please remember this. My father, so far as I am concerned, has no faults. He is a generous and courteous companion. Nevertheless, No. 79 h, Curzon street is no place for people who desire to lead normal lives."

And with that she was gone. Her reversion of disapproval was so complete and final that he had no courage for further argument. He had lost her almost as soon as he had found her.

CHAPTER VIII

Four men were discussing the verdict at the adjourned inquest upon Victor Biddle, at Soto's American bar about a fortnight later. They were Robert Fairfax, a young actor in musical comedy, Peter Jacks, a cinema producer, Gerald Morse, a dress designer, and Sidney Voss, a musical composer and librettist, all habitués of the place and members of the little circle toward which the dead man had seemed, during the last few weeks of his life, to have become attracted. At the table a short distance away, Francis Leddum was seated with a cocktail and a dish of almonds before him. He seemed to be studying an evening paper and to be taking but the scantiest notice of the conversation at the bar.

"It just shows," Peter Jacks declared, "that crime is the oldest game in the world. Given a reasonable amount of intelligence, and a murderer's business is about as simple as a sandwichman's."

"The police," Gerald Morse, a pale-faced, ascetic-looking youth, declared, "rely upon two things, circumstantial evidence and motive. In the present case there is no circumstantial evidence, and as to motive, poor old Victor was too big a fool to have an enemy in the world."

Sidney Voss, who was up for the Sheridan club and had once been there, glanced respectfully across at Francis.

"You ought to know something about crime and criminals, Mr. Leddum," he said. "Have you any theory about the affair?"

Francis set down the glass from which he had been drinking, and, folding up the evening paper, laid it by the side of him.

"As a matter of fact," he answered calmly, "I have."

The few words, simply spoken, yet in their way charged with menace, thrilled through the little room. Fairfax swung round upon his stool, a tall, aggressive-looking youth whose good looks were half eaten up with dissipation. His eyes were unnaturally bright, the cloudy remains in his glass indicated alcohol.

"Listen, you fellows!" he exclaimed. "Mr. Francis Leddum, the great criminal barrister, is going to solve the case."

Mystery of poor old Victor's death for us."

The three other young men all turned around from the bar. Their eyes and whole attention seemed riveted upon Francis. No one seemed to notice the newcomer who passed quietly to a chair in the background, although he was a person of some note and interest to all of them. Imperceptible and immaculate as ever, Sir Timothy Brust smiled amiably upon the little gathering, summoned a waiter and ordered a dry martini.

"I can scarcely promise to do that," Francis said slowly, his eyes resting for a second or two upon each of the four faces. "Exact solutions are a little out of my line. I think I can promise to give you a shock, though, if you're strong enough to stand it."

There was another of those curiously charged silences. The bartender paused with the cocktail-shaker still in his hand. Voss began to beat nervously upon the counter with his knuckles.

"We can stand anything but suspense," he declared. "Get on with your shoe-giving."

"I believe that the person responsible for the death of Victor Biddle is in this room at the present moment," Francis declared.

Again the silence, curious, tense and dramatic. Little Jimmy, the bartender, who had leaned forward to listen, stood with his mouth slightly open and the cocktail-shaker which was in his hand leaking drops upon the counter. The first conscious impulse of everybody seemed to be to glance suspiciously around the room. The four young men at the bar, Jimmy and one waiter, Francis and Sir Timothy Brust, were its only occupants.

"I say, you know, that's a bit thick, isn't it?" Sidney Voss stammered at last. "I wasn't in the place at all, I was in Manchester, but it's a bit rough on these other chaps, Victor's pals."

"I was dining at the Cafe Royal," Jacks declared, loudly.

Morse drew a little breath. "Every one knows that I was at Brighton," he muttered.

"I went home directly the bar here closed," Jimmy said, in a still desultory tone. "I heard nothing about it till the next morning."

"Alibi, by the bushel," Fairfax laughed harshly. "As for me, I was doing my show—every one knows that. I was never in the place at all."

"The murder was not committed in the place," Francis commented calmly. Fairfax laid out his stool. A spot of color blossomed in his pale cheeks, the glass which he was holding snapped in his fingers. He seemed suddenly possessed.

"I say, what the hell are you getting at?" he cried. "Are you accusing me—or any of us—Victor's pals?"

"I accuse no one," Francis replied, unperturbed. "You invited a statement from me and I made it."

Sir Timothy Brust rose from his place and made his way to the end of the counter, next to Fairfax and nearest Francis. He addressed the former. "There was an inscrutable smile upon his lips, his manner was reassuring."

"Young gentlemen," he begged, "play do not disturb yourself. I will answer for it that neither you nor any of your friends are the objects of Mr. Leddum's suspicion. Without a doubt, it is I to whom his somewhat bold statement refers."

They all stared at him, immersed in another crisis, breath of speech. He stepped a cigarette upon the counter and lit it. Fairfax, whose glass had just been refilled by the bartender, was still ghastly pale, shaking with nervousness and breathing hoarsely. Francis, tense and alert in his chair, watched the speaker, but said nothing.

"You see," Sir Timothy continued, addressing himself to the four young men at the bar, "it happens to have two special avocations in life. One is a sweet champagne and the other amateur detectives—their stories, their methods and everything about them. I chanced to sit upstairs in the restaurant, within hearing of Mr. Leddum and his friend Mr. Wilmore, the novelist, the other night, and I heard Mr. Leddum, very much to my chagrin, announce his intention of abandoning a career in which he has, if he will allow me to say so,—with a courteous bow to Francis—attained considerable distinction, to indulge in the moth-eaten, flamboyant and melodramatic antics of the lesser Sherlock Holmes. I fear that I could not resist the opportunity of joking him about his new avocation."

Every one was listening intently, including Shopland, who had just drifted into the room and subsided into a chair near Francis.

"I moved my place, therefore," Sir Timothy continued, "and I whispered to Mr. Leddum's ear some redomesticated to the effect that if he were planning to be the giant crime-detector of the world, I was by ambition the arch-criminal—or words to that effect. And to give emphasis to my words, I wound up by prophesying a crime in the immediate vicinity of the place within a few hours."

"A somewhat significant prophecy, under the circumstances," Francis remarked, reaching out for a dish of salted almonds and drawing them towards him.

Sir Timothy shrugged his shoulders deprecatingly.

"I will confess," he admitted, "that I had not in my mind an affair of such dimensions. My remark, however, has produced catalytic effects. The conversation to which I refer took place on the night of young Biddle's murder, and Mr. Leddum, with my somewhat, I confess, bombastic words in his memory, has pitched upon me as the bloodthirsty murderer."

"I Trust That I Have Succeeded in Setting These Young Gentlemen's Minds at Ease."

"Held on for a moment, sir," Peter Jacks begged, wiping the perspiration from his forehead. "We've got to have another drink quick. Poor old Bobby here looks knocked all of a heap, and I'm kind of jumpy myself. You'll join us, sir?"

"I thank you," was the courteous reply. "I do not as a rule indulge to the extent of more than one cocktail, but I will recognize the present as an exceptional case. To continue, then," he went on, after the glasses had been filled, "I have, during the last few weeks, experienced the ceaseless and lynch-eyed watch of Mr. Leddum and presumably his myrmidons. I do not know whether you are all acquainted with my name, but in case you are not, let me introduce myself. I am Sir Timothy Brust, chairman, as I dare say you know, of the United Transvaal Gold Mines, chairman, also of two of the principal hospitals in London, vice president of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, a patron of sport in many forms, a traveler in many countries, and a recipient of the honor of knighthood from His Majesty, in recognition of my services for various philanthropic works. These facts, however, have availed me nothing now that the bungling amateur investigator into crime has pointed the finger of suspicion towards me. My servants and neighbors have alike been plagued to death with cunning questions as to my life and habits. I have been watched in the streets and watched in my harmless amusements. My simple life has been pared into from every perspective and direction. In short, I am suspect. Mr. Leddum's terrifying statement a few minutes ago was directed towards me and me only."

There were murmurs of sympathy from the four young men, who each in his own fashion appeared to derive consolation from Sir Timothy's frank and somewhat caustic statement. Francis, who had listened unmoved to this flow of words, glanced towards the door behind which dark figures seemed to be loitering.

"That is all you have to say, Sir Timothy?" he asked politely.

Cokers Ready to Meet Latrobe High Tonight; Victory Is Imperative

Cokers Have Job Ahead of Winning Three Consecutive League Contests.

NEXT WITH JEANNETTE

With the Cokers going into another W P I A League basketball game tonight a crowd almost equal in size to the record-breaking one which saw the Scottsdale team play here, is expected. It is hardly believed it will be necessary to close the doors however. The opponent of the Cokers and Black tonight is Latrobe, always a difficult organization.

While Latrobe has not fared well in the league it is just such a team that rises to great heights at the unexpected moment and to avoid anything like this happening here the locals will be all prepared for whatever the visitors can show.

There are just three W P I A League games remaining on the schedule two after the clash tonight with Latrobe. If the Cokers can win all of them Connellsville is assured of the section title. If it loses one more however, it is possible there will be a tie—over a three-cornered one—between High School, Indiana and Norwin. To avoid any such possibility the locals are out to work their best and win the title without any play-offs.

The game this evening will be at 8:15 o'clock.

DUNBAR TOWNSHIP HI IS VICTORIOUS OVER GERMAN; SCORE 34-22

In a boxing bout staged before the Athletic Club of Jefferson, Greene county, last night by Guy C. Collins promoter, Eddie McManus a Mount Pleasant welterweight, kayoed Lew Bronson of McKeesport in the second round of a scheduled 10-round scrap. The Tube City brawler never got started.

A good preliminary was thoroughly enjoyed in it Kid Mullin also of McKeesport, and Jack Wolf of Jefferson, fought to a nice six-round draw.

Lion Tamers Bringing Second Story Morris Here on February 18

The Lion Tamers entertainers of the city championship will engage one of the Class A teams of Western Pennsylvania at the High School on Monday, February 18. It has been announced. The Second Story Morris of Pittsburgh, which team last season defeated the championship Coffey Club of the Smoky City will appear here. The Morris are undoubtedly classy and will be the fastest combination ever brought into Connellsville this year.

Booster Game Will Be Played Wednesday

The Lion Tamers and Captain Glass basketball teams will play a "Booster Day" game at the High School here Wednesday evening. Funds derived from the contest will go to the former team for the purchase of new uniforms.

In a previous game this year the Captain Glass team detracted from the laurels of championship by defeating the Lion Tamers at South Connellsville. The local passers want to even the score.

Nelson Girls Win Another Game Easily

The Nelson Girls tripping over to New Alexandria last night won in an easy fashion over the girl team at that place. The score was 35-6. Buttermore came into her own and garden-ered nine goals from the floor.

The home team scored only two field goals during the entire game and increased this score by a brace of free throws.

Of Interest to Fans.

On Monday night at the State Armory the Trinity Scholastics will meet the Confluence High School team. The Somerset county outfit will give the Trinity a good game.

Recently the latter team has strengthened its personnel by the addition of such players as Phillips, Spangler and Lewis.

Indiana High School runner-up for honors in the W P I A League last night won at Jeannette High in a hard-fought game by a score of 23-21. The game was played at Jeannette. This means the Cokers will absolutely have to win all games remaining in the league to come out on top and if Norwin is not defeated in the final game here it will result in a three-cornered tie for first place provided Connellsville, Norwin and Indiana do not lose any games in the meantime.

C Roy Hetzel school director who has promised a loving cup to the team if it wins the sectional championship is looking up prices. Not that prices matter any in this instance but he wants to be fully informed so that he can get one in a hurry.

In the Fayette County League the following scores were returned last night: Redstone 30, South Brownsville 17, Fairchance 15, Point Marion 8, Perryopolis 15, Brownsville 11, Dunbar Township 14, German Township 22, South Union 17, North Union 17, Smithfield 29, Belle Vernon 7.

Redstone and Perry High Schools practically clinched the championship in Section two and three of the county basketball league by their victories last night.

The Greenwood A C basketball club last night defeated the South Side Juniors by a score of 13-5.

Troop No. 8 Boy Scouts playing the Olympic team at the Armory floor yesterday afternoon won by a score of 10-16. The teams played neck to neck throughout.

The Lion Tamers go to Perry tonight to play the Perry Independents.

WORK OF BUREAU OF MINES IN SAMPLING COAL SINCE 1915

Collected in Newly Issued Publication Which Is Now Available.

IMPORTANCE OF ANALYSIS

Announcement of the issuance of Bulletin 230, "Analyses of samples of delivered coal collected from July 1, 1915 to January 1, 1922" is made by the Department of the Interior through the Bureau of Mines.

In recent years the government and other large consumers of coal have appreciated more and more the desirability of determining by chemical analysis and test the character and quality of the coal they purchase, states the author, Ned H. Snyder, fuel engineer, Bureau of Mines. Higher prices for coal point forcibly to the need of giving more study to engine room and boiler room efficiencies and economies, this implies an intimate knowledge of the character and quality of the fuel used. Analyses and tests of delivered coal furnish data whereby power plant results can be comprehensively studied and a continuous check maintained on the coal and on the conditions of plant operation.

The Bureau of Mines has been active in promoting the purchase of coal by the government under specific plans, that is by contracts that make definite requirements regarding the heating value of the coal expressed in British thermal units and the composition as shown by proximate analysis. Under many of these specification contracts the bidders guarantee the quality of the coal offered, and that guaranteed by the successful bidder becomes the standard of his contract. The deliveries are sampled and analyzed to determine whether the coal is of the quality guaranteed by the contractor, and if it is not, the price to be paid is decreased in proportion, but if the coal is of higher quality, the price is proportionately increased.

The known analyses of coals or the guaranteed analyses offered by the bidders may sometimes be used for determining the award of a contract but if the coals offered differ widely in characteristics it may be difficult to determine which would prove the cheapest fuel without data on their relative evaporative efficiencies. Hence the making of evaporative tests under service conditions may be necessary in order to determine which coal is particularly adapted for successful and economical use in a certain plant. Once a particular coal is selected, however, regardless of the procedure of determining the award of a contract, then the greatest advantage of the specification method is realized for it guarantees the purchaser receiving coal of uniform character and quality, thereby insuring the best results in the plant.

The success of the specification method for the purchase of coal and the reliability of analysis now rests largely on sampling. Improper sampling leads to controversy, with resulting condemnation of the specification method in general and of the value of laboratory analyses tests in particular. In sampling delivered coal the Bureau of Mines follows a definite procedure. A sample of not less than 1,000 pounds is systematically collected by taking equal increments at regular intervals throughout the delivery while coal is being loaded or unloaded and crushing and reducing this into a sample by successive stages to a sample of laboratory size.

A series of tables incorporated in the bulletin given the following data: The yearly average analyses of coal delivered for government use during the fiscal years 1915-1922. The samples analyzed were collected systematically throughout the entire deliveries by representatives of the various government departments under directions furnished by the Bureau of Mines.

The analyses of samples collected by samplers of the Bureau of Mines as coal was being loaded into railroad cars at the mine tipple during the period from July 1, 1915 to January 1, 1922. These samples were collected systematically through an entire day's run at the mines.

The analyses of samples collected by samplers of the Bureau of Mines at tipple sampling plants as coal was being loaded into vessels. These samples were collected systematically from four to fifteen railroad cars.

The analyses of samples collected by samplers of the Bureau of Mines at the Seawall Point sampling plant.

A chapter on "Elevator pool" clarifications giving an historical review of the subject and analyses of pool coals, is contained in Bulletin 279 which may be purchased from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D C.

In the Good Old Days

In the long ago, when Glenn McGraw, Jennings and others were on that famous old Baltimore Oriole team they finished the season, played their final exhibition game and each man was handed his check and his transportation home.

The gang had dinner together, and during it a big argument came up regarding a certain kind of a play. They scrapped and argued for some time. Then although all had their tickets in their pockets, they stayed over 'til the next day so they could try out the disputed play on the ball field.

It's hard to imagine a group of players doing such a thing in this day and age.
